

"Interested in cultural exchange? Let us introduce ourselves. AntiquityNOW

(www.antiquitynow.org) raises awareness of the importance of preserving our cultural heritage by showing how antiquity's legacy influences and shapes our lives today and for generations to come. Our hope is that sharing this knowledge will promote mutual understanding, tolerance and peaceful co-existence among our global family.

AntiquityNOW is calling for submissions by teachers in social studies and related fields depicting ancient/modern linkages for our website. We are looking for blogs (adult and Kids' Blogs), curricula, ideas for games, videos, educational activities, creative projects (for Today's Muse section), recipes and video submissions for LegacyQuest, an International Children's Film and Video Festival co-sponsored by the Archaeological Legacy Institute. See an example of our full immersion curriculum in Yesterday's Child, which has a prototype story called "The Tale of Yong and Bao" that is accompanied by a captioned PowerPoint lesson plan, educational activities, and examples of ancient music and recipes. All our materials adhere to core standards and promote literacy, critical thinking and different ways of learning in children. Of course, we will profile you, your class and your school on our site.

We also welcome your ideas for a project that AntiquityNOW will be conducting with the Capitol Legacy Institute at George Washington University on the connections between ancient Egypt and our modern times. AntiquityNOW is an affiliate of the Institute.

We hope you will join us in making antiquity come alive and fostering tomorrow's world citizens. To send your ideas, comments and submissions, visit

<http://antiquitynow.org/submissions/>. For LegacyQuest submissions, go to <http://antiquitynow.org/antiquitynow-month/legacy-quest-festival/>.